CODE COMMISSION AT WORK ON REVISION OF OUTGROWN STATUTES.

CARE OF DEFECTIVES URGED

Twenty-Five Leading Lawyers and Seelologists of State Labor to Make Missouri Good Gov. erned Commonwealth.

Jefferson City. Complete revision of the compulsory school attendance and child labor laws, measures for the care and support of children born out of wedlock and bills for the care and treat ment of defective children are among the measures proposed in the revisions of the Missouri statutes relating to children, is the report just issued of the Missouri code commission.

The commission was appointed by Gov. Gardner to continue the work of the one appointed in 1915 to revise and codify children's laws in the state. Only part of the children's code prepared by the 1915 commission was enacted at the 1917 session of the legislature. Among these are the statewide mothers' pension act, juvenile court act for the smaller counties of the state, new adoption law and a law providing treatment for incorrigible minors over the juvenile court age. The other laws in the code form the basis of the commissioner's new report. Reconsideration of some of the measures prepared by the 1915 commission and careful study of the childwelfare problems arising during the war have resulted in a few changes.

The commission is composed of 27 members, who have given their time to the work and raised the necessary funds. Judge Rhodes E. Cave of St Louis is chairman and Lucille B. Lowenstein of St. Louis is executive sec retary. The report states that in 1917 Missouri had 1,481,085 children under 21 years old, ranging seventh among the states in the number of children. "The problem of caring for children in Missouri is distinctly a rural one; 65 per cent of the children of the state live in the rural districts. In spite of this fact, little consideration has been given to child-welfare work in the counabout 67.000.000. There are new 71. ties. It is the aim of the commission to (SECOND people living under the Jap offer the same opportunity to the children in the state as is offered children

The commission proposes the following amendment to the child-labor law: Prohibiting employment of children under 14 in all occupations in "General, should we call this another the state, except that such children may work in agriculture when school is not in session; raising the age lim its for boys in street trades to 12, and for girls to 18, and requiring licenses and badges; prohibiting employment of children under 21 years in night messenger service; requiring physical examination and completion of eighth grade in school for the issuance of employment certificates for children between 14 and 16; raising compulsory school term throughout the state; extending the compulsory pital in France, school attendance law to deaf, blind | Before leaving and crippled children, where special classes for their training have been provided; requiring working children between 14 and 16 to attend continuation classes not less than eight hours a week, between the hours of $ a. m.

Teachers Plan Campaign

Members of the State Teachers' Association, in a conference at St. Louis, decided to make another effort to ob tain a new constitution for Missouri the movement having failed two years ago, when a bill providing for an election on the questions was defeated by one rote in the state senate.

A committee headed by William H. Black, president of the Missouri Valley College, at Marshall, was appointed to select a representative and a senator to introduce the same bill in the legis lature when it convenes Jan 8. Assurances were received from various organizations, including the Civic League of St. Louis, that the movement will receive their support. The decision to revive the new con stitution campaign resulted from the end of hostilities and the approach of a period of reconstruction. He declared that unless the present consti tution is abandoned the state will be seriously handicapped in expanding to meet the new situation

Pending the convening of the legis lature, the new constitution commit tor of the teachers' association will endeavor to obtain the endorsement and support of commercial and civic organizations of the state for the proposed election.

Mule Keeps Courts Busy

The jury in a suit for $285 damages to a mule, brought by the Maplewood Milling Co. against Robert A. Swink, St. Louis county, in the circuit court at Clayton, after debating nearly five hours, failed to agree on a verdict.

This suit is the end of a long line of trials and court procedurer starting last March, when Swink, while driving his automobile, hit a mule belonging to the milling company. The mule's leg was broken and later it had to be killed. The case has been on trial nearly eight months.
